POETICAL.

He Sleeps where They have Laid Him.

BY RIVE.

He sleeps where they have laid him,
On that noted battle plain;
Where 'mong hundreds of his comrades
He was numbered with the slain.

These his farewell words: "My sister
God of battles' can sustain,
I trust he'll hear the orphan's prayer,
And bring me safe again.

But if you should hear the tidings
That I've fallen in the fight—
Weep not, know my spirit ranges
In that land of pure delight."

It was not the will of heaven,
To bring him safe again,
For he sleeps where they have laid him,
On that fearful battle plain.

His grave is on the battle field,
But the sacred spot unknown,
And I may not weep beside it,
Though weeping so alone.

No simple token there can stand
In memory of the dead;
No myrtle planted on his breast,
No marble at his head.

I may not moisten with a tear
The sod upon his breast,
Nor watch with tenderness the spot
Where brother takes his rest.

Naught except the "dews of heaven"
By the spot for me can weep,
Nothing but the "stars of even"
On his grave will vigil keep.

And, O! God, the orphan sister,
For him still cannot but mourn—
Wilt thou give her faith and patience,
Until she to him return.

Miscellaneous.

A DOCTOR'S STORY.

"And now we'll have a cozy comfortable evening together," said my wife. "And—but what's that, Irving?"

My wife started nervously, as a sharp peal from the bell interrupted our brief interval of domestic quiet.

"Only the surgery bell, my dear.—Some body wanting me, I suppose."

And I went down stairs, secretly wondering to myself if, after all, there was such a very wide difference between a galley slave and a country doctor.

The surgery door stood wide open, but nobody was there, and through the blinding darkness without I could discern the dark outline of a close carriage, and a man standing at the horse's head.

"Who's there?—what's wanting?" I asked coming to the threshold and instinctively buttoning up the overcoat I had hurriedly thrown on.

"You'r wanted, doctor," said the man, speaking indistinctly behind the muffling that surrounded his face.

"Yes, but what for? Who wants me?"

"I am not at liberty to tell"

I had already entered the carriage, but this suspicious answer inspired me with distrust. I made a step to descend, but I was too late. The vehicle was already in motion.

"It is quite unnecessary to alarm yourself, doctor," said a quiet measured voice at my side. "Believe me, you are quite safe; and I trust you will feel no uneasiness when I tell you you must be blindfolded."

At the same instant a folded bandage was deftly slipped over my eyes.

"Hold!" I ejaculated. "It strikes me that this is rather superfluous.—The night is dark as Erebus, and you have no lamp!"

"Possibly," returned the dry voice; "but it is best to run no risks."

And then ensued a silence of some ten or fifteen minutes, while the carriage rolled swiftly along, and the low, measured breathing of my unknown companion kept time to my own uncomfortable thoughts.

At length my companion spoke again in the same soft, modulated tones.

"Doctor, one more little precaution is necessary—your promise never to divulge to human soul a word of this night's visit."

I hesitated.

"I cannot bind myself by any such covenant. The relation between physician and patient are of course confidential; but—"

The carriage paused abruptly here, and the door was swung open. At the same instant something cold touched my temple. It was the muzzle of a pistol. I recoiled in horror.

"You surely would not murder me?"

"You promise, doctor?"

"I promise!" I gasped, recoiling once more from the chilling touch of the cold steel at my temples.

"Very well; come!"

I was led up a narrow walk, through a doorway, into a room, where the bandage was removed suddenly from my eyes.

The spot was very familiar to me—a ruinous cottage, long since abandoned to decay, in the very heart of dense, swampy, woods. How the carriage had ever reached it I was at a loss to know. Upon a pile of straw, hurriedly thrown into the corner of the mouldering floor, lay a prostrate figure, moaning at every breath. His face was concealed by a handkerchief, and the blood was slowly dripping from a gunshot wound above the ankle, a wound which had been clumsily bandaged by some unskillful hand. Moreover, there was a dark, red stain on the straw where his head lay, and his light brown hair was matted with congulated drops. Two or three men stood around, with rude masks of black cloth drawn over their faces, in which three slits were cut for the eyes and mouth; and a female figure, knelt behind the heap of straw, veiled closely.

The men silently gave way for me as I advanced into the apartment, and held their lanterns so that the lurid light should fall full upon my strange patient. As silently I stooped and examined both wounds.

"Well?" asked my carriage companion.

"I can do nothing. He must die."

"Nonsense! A mere bullet through the leg—what does that amount to?" hurriedly gasped the man.

"In itself, not much; but that blow upon the skull must prove fatal."

A low, half-suppressed cry broke from the woman opposite. She tore the veil from her face as if she could not breathe through its heavy folds, revealing features as white and beautiful in their marble agony as so much sculptured stone. She did not seem more than thirty, but I afterwards knew that she was indeed more than ten years older. But in spite of her present anguish, how grandly beautiful she was! Large dark eyes—hair like coiled gold, catching strange gleams from the shifting lanterns—and a broad, smooth brow—it was a face you see but once in a lifetime.

And yet, in the midst of her distress she never spoke.

"At least you can do something for him, doctor?" said my interlocutor, impatiently. "Don't let us waste time here."

As I proceeded in my ministrations, the moaning grew fainter and fainter, the convulsive movements became scarcely perceptible. A faint gleam of hope lighted up the face of the woman opposite; she looked appealingly at me.

"He is better—he is surely better!"

"He will be soon," I answered, moved to pity in spite of myself. "He cannot live half an hour longer."

The horror of that sepulchral silence that fell upon us as my words died away—shall I ever forget it?—And five minutes afterwards the spasmodic and painful to [illegible] died into [illegible]

The woman lifted the corner of the handkerchief, and gazed in to the ghastly face. It was that of a young man of about twenty-two, and who had evidently been marvellously good looking.

"Oh, heavens, he is dead!"

Her clear agonized voice was ringing in my ears, as they let me back into the darkness of the night. I felt a bank note in my hand as I entered the carriage once more.

"Doctor, you have done your best; it is not your fault that your efforts have not been more successful. Remember, you are pledged to secrecy."

The next moment I was whirling swiftly through the November midnight, with the strange, unquiet feelings of one awakened suddenly from a startling dream. Yet it was no dream—alas! it was a startling reality.

The carriage stopped at a cross road near the village.

"Please to alight here, sir," said the driver. "You are not far from home."

I obeyed, and stood listening in the middle of the road, while the noise of the carriage wheels died away, losing its distinctness in the shriek of the restless winds. And the clock in the village church tolled out the hour of one.

Late as it was, however, my surgery was still open and lighted up; the servant from Haddenleigh Hall had just ridden up to the door.

"If you please, doctor, you are wanted immediatly at the Hall. The Colonel said you were to ride my horse if yours was not already saddled, and I can walk, so there will be no time lost."

I mechanically mounted the noble animal that stood waiting for me, and rode off, rather glad of an opportunity to revolve in my mind the singular adventure that had befallen me during the evening.

Haddenleigh stood a little back from the road, on a magnificent knoll crowned with century-old chesnuts and beeches, and I reached broad stone steps in about half an hour, by dint of rapid strides.

As I entered the vestibule, Colonel Hadden who had been pacing up and down the Hall in a perfect agony of patience, came to meet me.

"Is that you, Dr. Meller? I thought you never would come. We're in a pretty state of confusion here. Burglars in the house—my wife's set of diamonds gone—nobody knows what else—but old Hopkins left his sign manual upon one of the fellows.—They must be caught. They can't escape. For you see——"

"Yes, but Colonel Hadden——"

"Oh, aye—I understand, you—you want to see your patient? It's Hopkins, the Butler; he got an ugly blow on the left arm—and afterwards my wife went herself for Dr. Maynard—no offence, Meller, but she lives nearer than you; but he was out. She has only just returned, and I could'nt very well leave Hopkins, and Mrs. Hadden in such a state of excitement, and hesitated on going herself to fetch Dr. Maynard——"

"But, my dear sir——"

"Ah, true! Come along to Hopkins' room."

Hopkins, the butler, was as voluble as his master, and ten times as circumstantial; and by the time I had set his broken forearm, I was pretty well in possession of all the particulars of the attempted burglary at Haddenleigh. And thinking of my midnight patient, whose life had ebbed out upon the pile of straw, I felt a strange guiltiness as I listened to Colonel Hadden's eager conjectures as to the whereabouts of the desperadoes who had fled.

"And now, doctor, you'll take a glass of wine," said the hospitable old gentleman, ushering me into his library.

It was brilliantly lighted, and warm, with the crimson glow of a genial fire, before which, wrapped in the gorgeous folds of an Indian shawl,

"My wife, doctor. Isabel, my love, this is Dr. Meller."

We stood before one another in silence. I could not speak, for I knew that I was looking into the startled, agonized eyes of the woman who had knelt scarcely an hour ago by the dying couch in the desolate cottage—Colonel Hadden's new wife, of whose beauty I had heard so much.

The Colonel talked on, but I heard not a word that he said. I could not but marvel at the wonderful self-possession of the woman, she smiled and looked grave, and said 'Yes' and 'No' in the right places.

"To be sure," the Colonel was saying, as I woke into a sort of consciousness of his voice, "the loss of Isabel's diamonds is something serious, but of course we shall recover them again.—Only, my love, it was rather careless of you to leave them on the drawing-room table."

"It was careless," replied Mrs. Hadden, calmly. "Doctor, you are not going? Colonel, you have forgotten that curious old book you were wanting to show Mr. Meller."

As the door closed behind the honest old gentleman, Mrs Hadden glided up to me and placed her cold hand on mine; it was like the touch of an icicle.

"Doctor, you have my secret—you surely will not betray it?"

"I am pledged to silence, madam," I returned coldly; "but this deceit——"

"It is not my fault, doctor," wailed the woman, "it is my fate. How I endure it I can scarcely tell, were I to pause and think, I should go mad.—The man who died to-night was my son! Colonel Hadden knows nothing of my first marriage, nor of this dreadful secret of my son's criminal life, that has weighed me down for years.—Over and over again I have thought to escape it, but it has followed my footsteps like a doom. To-night closes that chapter of my life—oh heaven! how dreadfully! But my secret is safe — the diamonds provided for that!"

"But your husband, Mrs. Hadden?"

She covered her pallid, beautiful face with her hands.

"I know what you would say, Dr. Meller. I love and honor him beyond all men; but what can I do? Believe me, I have never willingly wronged or deceived him. I never dreamed of——"

She paused abruptly. Colonel Hadden was entering the room, and the smiling, casual remark she addressed to him, filled my heart with amazement—almost admiration.

I rode home to my blue-eyed little Eleanor, feeling, as I entered the snug sitting-room as if I were returning to the homely, happy atmosphere of every day life. But I never forgot the terrible excitement, the fearful suspense of that November night.

The desperadoes who had attempted to rifle Haddenleigh Hall were never detected or taken—all trace of them seemed to have utterly vanished out of the earth.

And were it not for the bank note which most liberally recompensed my services, and the everlasting witness borne by Mrs. Hadden's lovely face, I should almost have been tempted to fancy that all the events of that marvellous November midnight were the fragments of a dream.

This was my adventure—the first and last that ever crossed the pathway of my life.

Horace Greely's Advice.

HORACE GREELEY is, in many respects, a sort of Benjamin Franklin, towards our American youths. He has advice not brilliant but sound; he gives directions not profusely, but wisely; he is throughly practical. We take it that he wrote or inspired a recent editorial in the Tribune replying to a young man who writes that he is poor and wants to be rich. The article should be read by all boys aspiring to get rich honorably and for good purposes. Under five heads the article gives its advice:

1. Firmly resolve never to owe a debt.

2 Acquire promptly and thoroughly some useful calling.

3. Resolve not to be a rover.

4. Comprehend that there is work almost everywhere for him who can do it.

5. Realize that he who earns six pence per day more than he spends must get rich, while he who spends sixpence more than he earns must become poor.

The Jesuits in Rome.

The correspondent of the Boston Journal, writing from Rome, says:—Larger by far than any other order of monks in Rome is that of the Jesuits. Other Popes have suppressed them, but under the present Pointiff the order, thrives and prospers as in its palmiest days. They are encouraged and patronized by the Pope, who is a member of the order. On the last day of the year I saw him kneel before the high alter of the Church of the Jesuits, with the general of the order by his side, and surrounded by cardinals, archbishops, and priests, participating in the Te Deum Laudamus, the praise to God, then lifting aloft the holy sacrament, and bestowing his blessing on the brotherhood. Let it not be forgotten that this order is called the "black order" of monks, who are governed by one principle of action only—that the end justifies the means; that to propogate the Roman faith, it is right to become spies in private households, and false sconcers before the Inquisition; that the breaking of faith, breaches of trust, violations of honor, dissimulation, perjury, perfidy, lying, and more heinous crimes are virtues with this order, if the Roman religion may be advanced thereby. Let it be remembered that in nearly every country in Europe, this order, working ever in secret, in courts of kings, and in private households—has been restrained or suppressed; that in most countries Jesuits are considered as outlaws enemies of the public peace and welfare; that they have been suppressed again and again by the predecessors of the present Pope. It is necessary for us to take into view all of these facts to obtain a correct insight of the animus of the present Papal Government, and to comprehend its otherwise inexplicable actions—which will be given more in detail in another letter.

Wanted—A "Gurl."

The following piece of burlesque is designed to set off the ridiculous and insolent demands of "help" in these days of liberal ideas and "equal rights."

Wanted—A "gurl," to dwell in my family, assist my wife in doing the work, and give directions generally.

One of the Irish-German-American descent will answer, if she was born in Ireland, and knows a flapjack from a boot-jack.

We also expect that she will use something beside matches to get breakfast with.

Wages not much object, if she will only leave me enough of my income to pay for the crockery ware that she breaks.

Twenty Minutes for Refreshments.

The following experience of a humorous traveller, who attempted to get a dinner at Xenia, is worth reading by those who have had similar experience.

"Twenty minutes for dinner!" shouted the brakeman, as we approached Xenia,

Arrived there, I entered the dining-room and inquired of the waiter—

"What do you have for dinner?"

"Twenty minutes," was the hurried reply.

I told him I would try half a dozen minutes raw, on the half shell, just to see how they went. I told him to make a minute of it on his books.—He scratched his head, trying to comprehend the order, but finally gave it up and waited upon some one else.

I approached a man, who stood near the door with a roll of money in his hand.

"What do you have for dinner?"

"Half a dollar," says he.

I told him that I would take half a dollar well done. I asked him if he couldn't send me, in addition, a bound pocket-book stuffed with greenbacks, and some seven-thirties garnished with postage-stamps and ten cent script. Also a confederate bond, done brown, with lettuce alone (let us alone). I would like to wash my dinner down with national bank notes on "draft."

He said they were out of everything but the bank notes, and he then ordered the waiter to go to the bank and "draw" some

John Quincy Adams' Mother.

We find in an exchange this incident touching the mother of the eminent and distinguished old man. No one could have appreciated it more than Governor Briggs, whom we personally knew. Will not mothers try to make great and good men of their sons while they are small? When they are young is most to be done, if ever.

"Twelve or fifteen years ago," says ex Governor Briggs, "I left Washington three or four weeks in the spring. While at home, I perused myself of the letters of Mr. Adams' mother, and read them with exceeding interest. I remember an expression in one of the letters addressed to her son, while yet a boy twelve years of age, in substance. Says she 'I would rather see you laid in the grave than you should grow up a profane and graceless boy.'

"After returning to Washington, I went over and said to Mr. Adams, 'I have found out who made you!'

"What do you mean?' said he.

"I replied, 'I have been reading the letters of your mother.'

"If I had spoken that dear name to some little boy who had been for weeks away from his mother, his eyes could not have flashed more brightly, or his face have glowed more quickly than did the eye and face of that venerable old man when I pronounced the name of his mother. He stood up in his peculiar manner, and emphatically said: 'Yes, Mr. Briggs, all that is good in me, I owe to my mother.'

"Oh, what a testimony was that, from this venerable man to his mother, who had in his remembrance all the stages of his manhood.—'All that is good in me I owe to my mother.' Mothers, think of this when your bright-eyed little boy is about. Mothers make the first impression upon their children, and those are the last to be effaced."

The Division of Pennsylvania into two States.

Some of our western cotemporaries are given to spasms, but the latest and most agonizing specimen of these "fits" is in the shape of a suggestion from the Pittsburgh Sunday Leader, for a division of Pennsylvania into two States. The Leader proposes to take the following counties to form the new State:

Allegheny, Armstrong, Beaver, Bedford, Blair, Butler, Cambria, Clearfield, Crawford, Clarion, Erie, Elk, Forrest, Fayette, Greene, Indiana, Jefferson, Lawrence, Mercer, M'Kean, Somerset, Venango, Warren, Washington and Westmoreland.

—This looks very fine on paper, but until the Leader can suggest a plan to divide the Alleghony river and level the Allegheny mountain, it is not likely that the Keystone State will be divided.

STATE OF THINGS IN GEORGIA.—An Augusta letter says: 'Enterprise is as dead as if the country was a desert. There is a little sickly, pulling trade in the necessaries of life, in which purchasers buy by the ounce or pound, and sellers require to see the greenbacks before they adjust their scales and grasp their scoop. Values, as the word is understood in communities at peace, are about as nominal as they would have been to Robinson Crusoe and his freedman, Friday. There are no commercial calculations, because there is no commerce. The happy few who have a little money hold on to it like grim death, and, heedless of all the tempting offers of three, four, five, and even six per cent. a month, with all sorts of collaterals, prefer to sit and watch the hole in the wall where the stocking is deposited, in the belief that the bird in the hand is worth the whole feathered creation in the bush.

THE following ex-United States senators are still living: Hon. Walter Lowrie, New York city; Hon. Daniel Sturgeon, Uniontown, Pennsylvania; Hon. James Buchanan, Lancaster, Pennsylvania; Hon. William Bigler, Clearfield, Pennsylvania; Hon. Simon Cameron, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania; Hon. David Wilmot, Washington, District of Columbia. The following ex-Governors are still living: Hon. Joseph Ritner, Carlisle, Pennsylvania; Hon. David R. Porter, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania; Hon. William F. Johnston, Philadelphia; Hon. William Bigler, Clearfield, Pennsylvania; Hon. James Pollock, Philadelphia; Hon. William F. Packer, Williamsport, Pennsylvania; Hon. Andrew G. Curtin, Philadelphia.

THE cholera is on the increase in St. Petersburg; and febris recurrans, which carried off so many victims two years ago, has also made its appearance.

"THE ocean speaks eloquently, and forever," says Beecher. "Yes," retorted Prentice, "and there is no use in telling it to dry up."

"JOHN did you ever bet on a horse race?" "No, but I've seen my sister bet on an old mare."

THE BEAVER ARGUS.

J. WEYAND, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

March 6th, 1867.

Gov. Swann in a Strait.

Governor Swann was elected to the chief magistracy of Maryland some time ago by the Unionists of that State. His loyalty was undoubted at that time, and it was not until the war was about closed that any changes in his political opinions developed themselves. But the close of the struggle brought home a large number of ex rebels, and to gain the favor of these, Governor Swann embraced "Andy Johnsonism;" and as he had previously been a determined loyalist, so he now became the bitterest persecutor the Union men had in Maryland. Not only did he connive with the returned rebels, to get them into places of profit and power, but he deliberately assisted in bringing about a condition of things in that State at the last election, by which the Union men were driven to the wall by an open, bold violation of its Constitution. The Unionists submitted to this rather than have violence and anarchy inaugurated at the polls; and hence Swann and his rebel friends had their own way, and elected whomsoever they would for Representatives to the State Legislature. In this manner, and by these persons, a Legislature was chosen that recently elected Governor Swann to the U S. Senate from that State. Thus far everything went to suit the Swann party. But since then matters have taken a new turn. The Constitution of the State of Maryland provides that no person who has borne arms against the United States, or given aid and comfort to the rebellion, shall ever be allowed to vote in that State; and it is notorious that Governor Swann, instead of guarding this provision sacredly, threatened bloodshed if resistance to its violation was made at the recent election. No opposition was offered by the Unionists, but now Governor Swann learns that when he proposes to take the seat in the Senate to which he was lately elected, objection will be made, and the facts pertaining to the election referred to the Judiciary Committee of the Senate. This prospective action gives matters a doubtful appearance, and Governor Swann, who tendered his resignation as the Executive of the State some two weeks ago, now recalls it, evidently concluding that the United States Senate will declare his election to that body a fraud upon the people of Maryland, and in violation of the Constitution of the State. "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," thinks Governor Swann, and he therefore concludes to hold on to the Governorship of the State until his term expires, or he is assured that a seat in the Senate is in waiting for him.

—Since writing the above, Gov Swann appears to have given up senatorial pretensions entirely, and has resigned the doubtful seat in that body, referred to.

State Temperance Convention.

The friends of temperance everywhere have cause to rejoice over the result of the recent State Temperance Convention, held at Harrisburg. It was largely attended, and the Governor of the State presided over its temporary organization. The Convention was permanently organized by the selection of General Louis Wagner as President. Resolutions were adopted, very radical in their tone, and aiming toward a total prohibition of the sale of liquors for drinking purposes in the State. A committee was appointed to draw up a bill expressive of the sense of the Convention, which will be brought before the Legislature at an early day. Hon. John Cessna, of Bedford county, is chairman of this committee; and the fact that men so distinguished in the State as Mr. Cessna, Governor Geary, and Wagner are foremost in the movement, gives the temperance cause in Pennsylvania a prestige that it rarely, if ever had before.

Vetoes.

The President, true to his instincts, has vetoed the reconstruction bill, after the most solemn assurances on the part of some who were generally supposed to be authorized to speak for him.

The Veto message was received at half past 1 o'clock, P. M., and read through at once by the clerk. Thad. Stevens, upon the conclusion of the reading, rose and demanded a vote on the veto. After some little delay on the part of the Democracy, the bill passed over the veto by a vote of 135 to 47. The only Republican who voted against it was Mr. Hale of New York.

At the same time the bill regulating the tenure of office was returned to the Senate, the branch of Congress in which it had originated, accompanied with a veto message. The message having been read, the bill was immediately passed over the veto by the decisive vote of 35 to 11.

Both bills are therefore now laws despite the objections of the President.

Suffrage in the District of Columbia.

Congress, during its last Session invested the blacks of the District of Columbia with suffrage. This was done in the face of a mountain of opposition and abuse; but the blacks, under the advice of discreet white friends, went steadily to work in trying to prepare themselves for the new duties that thus devolved upon them.—Schools were at once organized, efficent teachers procured, literary societies established, and old and young, male and female, participated in all these means of acquiring information, and with a facility that surprised all who interested themselves in their behalf. They applied themselves closely, not only to show the Government that its kindness was worthily bestowed, but also to disarm the prejudice that existed against them as a race.

The first election in which they were allowed to take a part, was held in Georgtown last week, and was for the selection of a Mayor and Town Council. At this election the "Conservative" whites acted an unmanly part. In the use of insulting epithets, and low vulgurity they first attempted to keep the blacks from attending the election at all. But failing in this, and fearing to resort to violence because of the law and police, they turned in to contest the result, and the city was canvassed as it had never been before. The negroes acted with the radical whites, and had lists of all the colored voters prepared. With these they stood near the window, and as a voter deposited his ballot his name was scratched from them, and as night aproached the absentees were sent for and hurried to the polls. In fact "every inch of ground was fought over," and the contest ended in the success of the radical candidate for Mayor by a majority of 96 and the election of 7 radical councilmen to 4 of the conservative order. The registry showed 970 negro voters and 1350 white.

The behavior of the blacks in the District of Columbia, before and on the day of the election in Georgetown, is an example worthy of emulation by all the negroes in the country. They are represented to have been remarkably studious, industrious, sober, kind to each other, and in their intercourse with the whites acted modestly, patiently and endured more than was expected of them. By this course of conduct they have held fast the friends they had before, and enlisted a sympathy from others who bore them no friendship a few months ago.

The Tariff Bill Defeated.

The tariff bill, which has been before Congress for so many weeks, and which was turned and twisted into so many different shapes, suffered defeat on the 28th inst. Nothing more will be attempted in connection with its passage for some time to come, and in the meantime the manufacturing interests of the country will suffer as they never did before. The N. Y. Tribune, in speaking of the defeat of the bill, thus shows how it was done:

The debate in the House, yesterday, did not turn upon the provisions of the bill, but upon the possibility of passing any bill this session. Mr. Morrill moved to discharge the committee of the Whole for the purpose of bringing the bill to a vote, and in the discussion which followed, Mr. Shenck intimated that the President would veto it, while Mr. Allison alleged that he had made no factious opposition to the bill, but voted against the motion. On this test vote, the motion, which required two-thirds to pass, was defeated by 105 Yeas to 64 Nays. Mr. Stevens then moved to discharge the Committee of the Whole, and to concur with the Senate, with the amendments already passed by the House, and an additional concession to the wool interest. Thus all the amendments of the Committee on Ways and Means not acted upon would be abandoned. The House refused to adopt this motion, by 102 Yeas to 69 Nays. A joint resolution was then offered by Mr. Morrill, imposing an additional duty of 20 per cent of the duty now paid upon all goods, with certain specified exceptions, which was lost, by 94 to 86.—The House also rejected, by 90 Yeas to 64 Nays, a joint resolution offered by Mr. Kasson in regard to wool.—After these decisive votes no further effort will be made in this Congress to pass the bill. It died in the arms of its friends, who, in quarreling about the means of cure, experimented till they killed the patient. If the open, and still more the covert enemies of the bill, escape the retribution they deserve, we do not mean it shall be for want of exposure.—They shall have full credit for the mischief they have wrought; for the loss that is to fall upon the country by reason of their hostility or treachery; for the delay, every day of which takes the bread out of the mouths of workingmen; for the closed mills, for their ruined owners, for the arrested development of manufactures, and for the blow they have aimed at the life of American Industry.

SENATOR WADE of Ohio has been nominated in a Republican caucus for President of the Senate from March 4 by a vote of 22 to 7 for Mr. Fessenden. Mr. Wade was elected and assumed his duties on Monday.

We were in error last week in stating that the "snake bill" had been lost in the House at Harrisburg. The vote on it in that branch of the Legislature has not yet been taken, and from what we are able to learn on the subject it is highly probable that but little opposition will be made to it when it is reached. No person now, apparently sees a "snake" in it but the Local; and as its influence at the State capital is not alarmingly potential it will more than likely pass the House and become a law, as soon as the ordinary course of legislation brings it up

That the Local saw what is not to be seen in the bill is evident from the fact that many of the Representatives from the adjoining counties, and from those west of us, voted for the suspension of the rules, just as Mr. Quay did, and not one of them has been charged by his constituents with being governed by improper motives in so doing; and not a newspaper of either party in their respective counties, (except the two referred to last week,) has "seen or talked snake" either before, at the time, or since the bill was brought into the Legislature. This circumstance itself, ought to satisfy the Local that it had repeated the cry of "stop thief" when nothing had been stolen, and if its editor had any sagacity, he would have abandoned pursuit immediately after knowing this, and seeing others do so.

THE Democratic Members of Congress, on the 4th inst., presented a protest against the assembling of the Fortieth Congress on that day, on the ground that seventeen of the States were not, and would not be represented in it.

THE impeachment committee made its report before Congress adjourned, and its investigations appear to have amounted to but little. The majority of the committee however have recommended the continuation of the "sifting" to the Fortieth Congress, which met on the 4th of March.

A BANKRUPT BILL passed Congress at the close of the session, and is now a law. Its provisions will be published in pamphlet form in a few days.

NEBRASKA has been admitted into the Union as a State—making the thirty-seventh in the family of States.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26, 1867.

DEAR ARGUS: The Thirty Ninth Congress is about to wind up its eventful session, and we might enumerate among its many important acts the one last passed looking toward the permanent reconstruction of the revolting States, known as the "Sherman bill," an act that seems to meet with less objection than Mr. Steven's military bill, as this bill points out the way and mode by which a civil and republican frame of government shall be formed and submitted to the people for their approval. Irrespective of race or color, (excepting the leading rebels, who are excluded from office in the constitutional amendment,) it is indeed considered too lenient, as the rebels are allowed to participate in reconstructing a government they so persistently strove to destroy. For it can hardly be expected that good can come out of evil, or that a rebellious people could institute a good form of Government. The measure is regarded by some as one of "universal amnesty for universal suffrage." I believe the South will accept it. I am sure they will if Mr. Johnson does not advise them to reject it, which he may do, for he is bad enough to do anything; that is the light in which he is held here. The Revenue tax bill was completed and passed yesterday. The bill making appropriations for our defenders (army and navy) was defeated in the house last evening by striking out the enacting clause, which was moved by Mr. Scofield, and carried by a small majority.

The Tariff bill will likely come up to-day, and, I am sorry to say, I have my fears as to its passage this session. It is really astonishing to witness the diversified sentiments that are entertained by the members of the House all-important subject, and of such interest to the American people. I am still in hopes it will pass. I think the bankrupt bill will not be reached this session. Our Democratic friends would favor its passage, as they well recollect the harvest they reaped from a similar bill, passed by the Whig party in the administration of President Harrison. The committee on impeachment will not likely make any report this session, although, I am informed, there are startling evidences of his guilt in the possession of the committee. Perhaps the honor of impeachment may be left to the fearless and intrepid Butler during the Fortieth Congress.

The true men of the city of Georgetown, with the aid of the colored citizens, (alike loyal,) carried their municiple election yesterday; electing a mayor and seven out of eleven councilmen for the first time for some years; as the city is three-fourths out and out traitors to their Government; as they publicly rejoiced over our defeat at the battle of Bull Run. It is said all passed off quietly, the negroes behaving themselves in a very becoming manner, by leaving for home after depositing their vote, so it seems as in the case of their being made free in the District, no blood was shed, or harm has followed either one of the long withheld acts of justice now granted to that oppressed race. A true bill has been found against Surratt, as did I suppose he will be put on his trial in a few days. If anything of interest connected with his trial, or with the expiring Thirty-Ninth Congress shall transpire, you may hear from me again.

Educational Correspondence.

MR EDITOR: On last Friday evening quite a respectable audience of parents and friends of education assembled at school house No. 2, Greene township, to listen to an address by the county Superintendent, J. L. Reed. Mr. Reed chose for his subject "The mental, moral and physical education of man."—Each of these points was carefully and ably considered. Showing to teachers and those having the training of youth the great importance of being able to impart correct ideas to the minds; having a due regard to the moral well-being of the young; and to see that the physical powers are not allowed to become dwarfed and decayed; for it cannot be expected to see a strong and vigorous intellect encased in a weakly frame.—In connection with these points, Mr. Reed spoke of the importance of having good school houses, well constructed and ventilated. Great importance was also attached to the location of the house, as respected health, convenience and desirableness. And, indeed, the remark respecting location was made in the right place.—Of the nine school houses in this township, (independent of the two boroughs, Hookstown and Georgetown) not one is desirably located.—Some of them stuck deep down in some ugly ravine, others again reared on some high, bleak point, exposed to the rude blasts of winter and the scorching heat of summer. No play ground attached, nothing at all inviting to little folks. We said no attention had been paid to the location of these houses. In this we are mistaken; indeed, it must have required considerable ingenuity to seek out such hideous locations, but we hope for a better state of affairs ere long. We hope ere long to see good school houses properly located, take the place of these miserable old shells, which are by no means fit for the purpose designed. In the course of the address, the special training of teachers was particularly noticed. The great importance of having a Normal school speedily established in this Normal district was earnestly discussed. How much our teachers need special training for their work. And, indeed, we might say it has become an established fact in the minds of thinking people, that the only place teachers can receive this special training is at Normal schools.—Select schools, as they are generally conducted, do not give the training that is demanded. Teacher's Institutes, if properly conducted, no doubt effect something, but this is not enough. If it is considered indispensibly necessary that Ministers, Lawyers and Doctors require long and careful training to prepare them for their respective professions, why should not teachers be required to prepare themselves for their work? Why don't the enlightened community of Beaver county see to it that every teacher in her common schools has been properly trained, and only give her schools to those who have spent their time and money in acquiring a knowledge of their profession. The oft quoted expression that "any person can teach school," will no longer pass, and the man heard uttering it is regarded as a relic of past ages. We are glad to learn that measures are being used to soon have a Normal school established in this district, and we sincerely hope the matter will be agitated by all those who earnestly desire the prosperity of our Common schools, until, at no distant day we will be enabled to reap the full benefit of such an institution.

The School choir, conducted by their teacher, Miss. Maggie Reed, favored the audience with some excellent songs during the meeting. A. A. M.

Suffrage in Tennessee.

THE State of Tennessee has resolved to complete the logical fruits of treason's wanton war, by enfranchising the freedmen and disfranchising rebels. One of the first acts of the loyal legislature of that State was to deny suffrage to those who had made war upon the government, and last week the legislature passed an act extending suffrage to all loyal men without regard to caste or color, and the Governor has approved it. The faithful men of Tennessee having felt the full measure of rebel barbarity, know well how essential to the peace and safety of the people is the withdrawal of all power from those who have so terribly abused it, and they are manifestly in earnest, as they have passed a military bill to provide State troops when necessary to enforce the laws and maintain order. The negroes of Tennessee, in by-gone days, voted with the whites, and once chose Cave Johnson to the Senate, and at another time decided a contest that sent John Bell to Congress. Now they return to the exercise of all the rights of manhood, and will command respect and protection by their political power as citizens. How long will it require the Democracy of the North to learn that the world moves?—Chambersburg Repository.

Politics in Maryland.

The Maryland Radical State Convention met in Baltimore on Wednesday. It was numerously attended.—Dr. Ohr, of Alleghany county, was President. Strong resolutions were adopted as a platform for the party in the State. Universal manhood suffrage was proclaimed, and the Conservatives of the State were threatened with Congressional interference i. the plan of calling a State Conservative Convention is carried out except on the broad platform of universal suffrage. The same party held a large mass meeting at the same place Wednesday night. The house was crowded. Speeches were made by Horace Maynard, of Tennessee; Hon. Columbus Delano, of Ohio, and others, all in favor of negro suffrage. The President was denounced, and the course of Congress commended.

PROPOSALS

Pennsylvania Agricultural Land Scrip

FOR SALE.

THE Board of Commissioners now offer for sale 520,000 acres of Agricultural College Land Scrip, being the balance of the Scrip granted to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania for the endowment of Agricultural Colleges in this State.

Proposals for the purchase of this Land Scrip, addressed to "The Board of Commissioners of Agricultural Land Scrip," will be received at the Surveyor General's office, at Harrisburg, until 12 o'clock, M., on Wednesday, April 10, 1867.

This land may be located in any State or Territory, by the holders of the Scrip, upon any of the unappropriated lands (except mineral lands) of the United States, which may be subject to sale at private entry. Each piece of scrip represents a quarter section of one hundred and sixty acres, is issued in blank, and will be transferable, without endorsement or formal assignment. The blank need not be filled until the scrip is presented for location and entry, when the party holding it can fill the blank and enter the land in his own name. Bids must be made as per acre, and no bids will be received for less than one quarter section.

The Scrip will be issued immediately on the payment of the money to the Surveyor General. On all bids for a less quantity than 40,000 acres, one-third of the purchase money must be paid within ten days, and the remaining two-thirds within thirty days after notification of the acceptance of the bid or bids by the Board of Commissioners.

THANKS.—We are under obligations to Col. Taylor, of the State Senate, Hon. G. V. Lawrance, of the U. S. House of Representatives, and Hon. W. D. Kelley, for valuable public documents.

BROUGHT TO JAIL.—On Feb. 23d Thos. Harkinson was brought to the Jail of this county on a charge of larceny preferred by a citizen of New Brighton. The alleged crime, is also reported to have been committed in that town.

LECTURE BY REV A. B. BRADFORD.—We notice in the Salem (O.) Journal, that Rev. A. B. Bradford, of this county, lectured in that place on Friday evening of last week. The Journal speaks in complimentary terms of the lecture.

SIGNED BY THE GOVERNOR.—On the 19th inst., the Governor notified the Legislature, that he had approved "An act to extend the provisions of the act to prohibit the granting of licenses to sell intoxicating drinks within the county of Potter, approved April 11th, 1866, to the county of Beaver."

A SNOW STORM.—On Saturday last quite a snow storm visited this locality. On Monday the snow covered the ground to the depth of about three inches and sleds and sleighs made themselves quite numerous again on our streets. Tuesday's sun, however, was too strong for it, and by night much of it had passed away, leaving us a supply of mud "on hand."

WALL PAPER &c.—Mr. B. Mulheim in Bridgewater, has a most excellent assortment of wall paper & fancy goods. That he sells wall paper, window shades &c. cheap, we know from experience, for in company with others, we once looked at his stock, inquired prices, then went to Pittsburgh, did the same there, returned and bought of Mr. Mulheim, and at much better rates than the same articles were offered us in the city.

GRADUATED.—We notice among the Graduates of Duff's Commercial College, last month the name of Charles D. Mitchell, of New Brighton, this county. Mr. M. is a young gentleman of fine attainments, good habits, and much energy, and will no doubt make use of his commercial instruction to some advantage. He is a son of David Mitchell Esq. of that place, who is well and favorably known to many of our citizens.

ON A CRUISE.—For some time past three of our citizens, viz: Capt. Hull, David Shumaker, and Jas. W. Edgar, have been engaged in fitting up a boat, with a view of taking a load of Beaver county oil down the river. They purposed selling out their cargo between this and Cincinnati. All things being in readiness, they left this place on Tuesday of last week, dropped down to Smith's Ferry, got their "ile" aboard and we presume by this time are down the Ohio a considerable distance, leaving a supply of "illuminator" at all points touched by their craft. Success to the enterprise.

IGNORED.—The bill for libel against the Editor of the Meadville Republican, was ignored. He had copied an article from another paper, accusing a Mr. Jones of horse stealing. Discovering that it was an error, that Mr. Jones had only been arrested, but proved to be the wrong man—he offered that gentleman the use of his columns for a denial; but Jones must have law, and he got it. The Republican asks him how to come and pay for his paper and be a happy man.

In the case against the Editor of the Journal of the same place, for libel, on oath of Miss Clara G. Hosmer, the Grand Jury found a true bill.

WANTS AN OFFICE.—Some Democratic politician of South Beaver township, has recently been writing quite a number of letters to the Local. He makes all sorts of charges against his Republican neighbors; and it is easily seen that a desire to get himself into some little office at the Spring election, lies at the bottom of his present effusions in that paper. Our South Beaver friends should therefore be a little cautious in this particular. The man who is so extremely anxious for a little position, as this writer shows himself to be, wants that position for no public good. His object is either to benefit his political friends, or "feather his own nest," and to prevent him from doing either or both, if we were a resident of that township, we would favor the policy of seating him in the rear.

REMOVAL.—One of the most accomodating and enterprising merchants of our county, is Mr. Watt Gealy of Bridgewater. The people generally are ascertaining this, and the result of the information is an extensive and rapidly increasing business. To keep pace with this condition of things, Mr. Gealy has found it necessary to provide himself with more "elbow room" and he has accordingly taken the large room on Water street formerly occupied by S. M. Dickey, two doors below Stiles & Shallenberger's store, to which he will remove his stock next week. Persons visiting Bridgewater in search of any articles in his line, should not fail to "look in" upon him in his new location. He is always up to the fashions and makes it a point to sell cheap.

THE MISSIONARY BUSINESS.—The Local of two weeks ago contained this paragraph:

It was announced in one of the Churches in Beaver, last Sunday, that on next Sunday the annual collection for the heathen missionary fund would take place, and members were requested to come prepared for it. Less than two months ago, it was announced in the course of a sermon in the same church, that with ALL the money which had been given and expended in the heathen missionary cause, and all the years of trial and labor which had been bestowed in that direction, there was not a certainty of the conversion of more than three or four thousand from heathenism, and it was not positively certain that even that number were honest in their profession and were not at any favorable moment ready to relapse into their original barbaric state.

In the last edition of the same paper we find this squib directed to us:

Will the Argus answer us a question or two?—If the Church of which it regards itself the only mighty shield, is so decidedly in favor of missionary contributions, and opposed to our proposition in behalf of the destitute at home, why did the pastor of that Church, but a few Sabbaths ago dare to show as he did, the uselessness of such contributions?

By enlightening the Local a little on its first article, it will be seen that no necessity exists for answering the question it puts to us in the second. Such a statement as the Local makes was never made in Beaver by any orthodox minister, and so ridiculous is it that we did not think it worth noticing at the time. But the preacher referred to did say "that in some instances Missionaries had labored several years in a new field before making a single convert, and that heathen converts to christianity did not usually measure up to the standard of moral excellence, which characterize professors in civilized and christian countries." These are words very different from those put in the Pastors mouth by the editor of the Local, and in his future church going, we advise him to prick his ears, if he would hear, and hear only, that which was said. In doing so, he will probably not again expose his ignorance by controverting positions never taken, and running a "tilt" with facts known and recognized by all church attendants and readers of religious papers.

TAVERN LICENSES.—The application for tavern license in this county were taken up by the Court on Monday forenoon last, when Mr. Henderson, on behalf of those opposed to the granting of any license, presented a certified copy of an Act passed by the Legislature at the present session investing the Court with power to refuse every application for license, unless satisfied that the granting of the same would be for the public good and the welfare of the community.

His Honor, the President Judge, while avowing his readiness to go to the farthest extent in breaking up the evils of drunkenness in our midst, nevertheless condemned in decided terms the course of the Temperance men in procuring legislation which as he said conveniently rolled over on the shoulders of the Court a responsibility a portion of which, at least, they should have taken upon themselves. While he thought the Court had good ground of complaint on this score, it would not hesitate to exercise the authority vested in it by this Act of Assembly, however unpleasant might be the performance of such a duty. At this age of the world it was impossible for the court to say that the granting of a license to sell liquor would subserve the public good or redound to the welfare of the community.—Although this was the opinion of the Court, still if any applicant felt like undertaking to convince them that these ends would be promoted by the granting of a license, he should be afforded a full opportunity to make the effort.

The applications of Mrs. Valentine, Michael Waldron, and Little, Melvin & Co., were then taken up and severally refused, the first upon the ground that a former license had been transferred to a third party, and the latter upon the general ground mentioned in the Act of the Legislature referred to. The applications from the other parts of the county were laid over until next term.—Washington Reporter.

The act of the Legislature here referred to is a local one and only applicable, we believe, to Washington county.

AN INVITATION TO INVEST.—We are in receipt of a letter dated "Paris, France, January 24th 1867," and signed "Napoleon Gallsi," in which the writer speaks in very flattering terms of America in general, and the Northern States in particular. He also alludes to the late "intestine struggle" in this country, and avers that the Unionists, in putting down the rebellion, accomplished more than France expected them to do. All this is very well, but "Napoleon Gallsi" now comes down to business. He informs us that the great "Universal Exposition" will soon be held in Paris' and that after the first few days of its opening he will be on the "promenade" much of his time, and would like to make a contract with us, to furnish two letters per week for publication in our paper. Each letter, he says, will be given us for $10 in gold, written in French, or $15 in gold, if he must translate it himself. He says he will have no objection to our clubbing with other papers in our town if it be positively necessary to do so, in order to raise the "stamps," but prefers to have his letters published in but one of the papers in each of the "great business centers." The money, he tells us, can be paid at any banking house in Paris, where we may have credit. Monsieur takes us between "wind and water" with this proposition, as we have neither credit in Paris nor gold at Beaver; but if the Local will "jine" us we will agree to furnish the Frenchman with one letter from Beaver, for every one he sends us from Paris. This is positively the best we will do on the subject to which he invites our attention.

THERE is life in Rochester, also in Bridgewater; but Beaver is as ghostly as ever.—Local.

The Local has a very limited circulation in Beaver. Why this is so we will not attempt to explain at the present time; but that it passes into but few of the families of the town in which it is published, is a fact, nevertheless. Its editor knows this, and hence he rarely, if ever, permits an opportunity to pass without speaking disparagingly of the place, or making a "drive" at some of its citizens.—Here these disparaging remarks are unheeded, and the "drives" are considered valuable, in a political point of view; for no greater misfortune can befal a Republican than the flattery of the Local, and but few things will accomplish so much for him as to be the subject of its spleen. A vast amount of stupidity reigns about the Local office, or it would know this fact itself; for it is patent to almost everybody else.

GENERAL TICKET AGENTS.—The Cincinnati Railroader gives the following pen portraits of two of the most prominent railroad ticket agents in the country, as follows:

F. R. Myers is a tall, dark complexioned man, with dark hair cut short to the scalp.—His eyes are black, and a nose long and sharp, which gives him the appearance of "righteousness," which we do not know whether he has or not. Were we to meet him on the street without knowing who he was, we would take him to be a successful theatrical manager, and not the General Ticket Agent of two roads, as he is—the Pittsburgh Fort Wayne and Chicago, and Cleveland and Pittsburgh roads.

H. W. Gwinner, General Passenger Agent of the Pennsylvania Central, is one of the "tall" members. He will reach six feet four, and weigh two hundred avordupois. He is large well made, dresses in gray; wears full whiskers, and has long shaggy eyebrows, which makes him appear "crusty." If we were told that he had a strong will it would be about what we would suppose.

PROPERTY SOLD.—During the past week, Samuel Davenport and E. P. Kuhn, Esqs., both well and favorably known in this county, disposed of their respective dwellings in Beaver, with the view of moving to and locating in Fort Wayne, Indiana. Mr. Jesse Moore purchased the property of Mr. Davenport, and Mr. J. B. Rhodes becomes the owner of Mr. Kuhn's dwelling. We are sorry that these gentlemen have found it necessary, in the prosecution of business to leave us; for two more intelligent, gentlemenly and high-toned citizens cannot anywhere be found. We are certain that we speak the feelings of our entire community in hoping that much prosperity may attend them in their new homes.

ACQUITTAL OF "BABE" MONTGOMERY, &C.—The trial of "Babe" Montgomery in Washington county last week for the murder of Dinsmore was concluded on last Saturday night, and resulted in his acquittal, Fogler refusing to testify in the trial.

The Lennox case has been continued until the next term of court.

Fogler, one of the murderes of Dinsmore, was sentenced to death on Thursday by Judge Acheson, and received the sentence with a disdainful smile on his face. That he has been duped by scoundrels in high position is painfully evident to all.

Agricultural.

The Fourteenth Annual Meeting of the Beaver County Agricultural Society, will be held at the Court House, on Monday, March 18th, at 1 o'clock P. M.

The election of officers for the coming year, and other important business will be brought before the meeting. A general attendance is requested.

Wm. SHROADES, Pres.
Wm. S. BARCLAY, Sec'y.

The New Jury Bill.

The new Jury Bill has passed both branches of the Legislature, and is now in the hands of the Governor. As there is no doubt of its approval we here publish its material provisions:

AN Act for the better and more impartial selection of persons to serve as jurors in each of the counties of this Commonwealth.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That at the general election to be held on the second Tuesday of October, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, and every second year thereafter, at such election, the qualified electors of each of the counties of this Commonwealth, shall elect, in the manner now provided by law for the election of other county officers, two sober, intelligent citizens of said counties to serve as jury commissioners, for the period of two years: Provided, That each of said qualified electors shall vote for one person as jury commissioner, at any such election, and the persons having the greatest number of votes for jury commissioner, shall be duly elected.

SEC. 2. It shall be the duty of said jury commissioners to meet with the sheriff at the seat of justice of each county, respectively, at least twenty days before the first term of court of common pleas, in every year, and thereupon proceed, with due diligence, to select, alternately, from the adult male taxable citizens of the county at large, a sufficient number of sober, intelligent and judicious persons, to serve as jurors in the several courts of each county, during that year; and as soon as the said selection shall be completed, the said jury commissioners and sheriff shall, in the mode and manner directed by law, place the names of the persons so selected in the proper jury wheel.

SEC. 3. The said jury commissioners and the sheriff of each county, respectively, or any two of them, shall draw from the proper jury wheel panels of jurors for the trial of issues in fact, which may be taken in any action in court, in the manner now practiced and allowed; but before the said jury commissioners and sheriff of each county, respectively, shall proceed to select or draw jurors, in the manner aforesaid, they shall severally take the oath or affirmation now prescribed by law, to be taken by the sheriff and county commissioners, before selecting and drawing jurors.

It will be seen that the sheriff of each county is made a party to the selection of jurors. This relieves the bill of many of the objections heretofore urged against the proposed change.

Lines Written on the Death of little Florence Emma M.

Her little feet had just begun
To stray out-doors amid the roses,
Her childish voice had just begun
To lisp in words the sweetest closes,
When softly "evo" we felt the spell,
She clasped the sacred golden keys
That lock the gates where angels dwell,
And entered to the Prince of Peace.

The halo from the heavenly throne
Fell in a smile on lips reposing,
And left its impress softly shown,
Like fresh young rose leaves just unclos'g.
The light of heaven, blessing earth,
The first faint dawn that on us breaks,
Of that, the promised newer birth,
To which the heavenly spirit wakes.

And still the little lisper speaks,
And smiles upon us from above,
With dimples dawning on her cheeks
At the greatness of her Savior's love.
Her little feet have gone before,
To guide us to the realm of light,
Where death and sorrow are no more,
And day is never veiled in night.

PETROLEUM MARKET.

BEAVER, Pa., March, 6.

The oil market has not yet taken the upward turn so long looked for.

At Pittsburgh the receipts for the past week have been large, and prices were from $2.00 to $3.25 according to gravity, without packages.

At Oil City on Monday, small lots only were changing hands, and prices were form $2.15 to $2.30.

At Smith's Ferry business is dull but a better condition of things is anticipated as soon as winter fairly breaks up. Crude, at the beginning of the week was worth at the wells $1.60.
